

Fearless Author Leads Public Effort to Charge President George W. Bush With Crimes

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, July 7, 2021 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Acclaimed Author Steven C. Markoff is fearlessly leading a public effort to charge President George W. Bush for the three crimes outlined in his book, "The Case Against George W. Bush." The effort came after an outpouring of support and encouragement from his appearance on the Ralph Nader Radio Hour on April 17, 2021.

Mr. Markoff's "Call to Action" on his website thecaseagainstgeorgewbush.org follows: "After my interview with Ralph Nader about my book, 'The Case Against George W. Bush,' on April 17, 2021, I received an outpouring of support and encouragement.

From the many emails I received from that interview, it's clear that many of you share my view that W. Bush should be investigated, if not convicted and jailed. Below are my thoughts on how we can best increase the chances Bush is at least investigated.

Since the Nader interview, I have concluded that few if any politicians will stick their necks out or go on the record against W. for many reasons. Some believe what he did was no worse than what other presidents have done. Others are concerned that our country has more pressing immediate problems than angering those who think he wasn't such a bad president or that the things he did were proper under the circumstances. While some of those concerns have some merit, none are in my view reasons to let W. escape justice.

Importantly, and perhaps counterintuitively, I now think that mentioning my book in your outreach efforts to have W. investigated may not be useful, and it could even be a minus if your outreach seems like a book marketing campaign when the reason I wrote the book is to increase the chances that W. faces consequences for his criminal acts, criminal negligence leading up to 9/11, admitting to torturing people and taking our country by falsehoods into the unnecessary and disastrous 2003 Iraq war.

I believe that the most important point in reaching out and making contact with those who could start an investigation of W. is to stick to the most important issue, that W. should at least be investigated for what seem to be his crimes. Few know, for example, that W. Bush confirmed if not bragged about his approval of waterboarding prisoners, and that waterboarding has been considered torture (and a crime) under US law going back to at least 1922.

Therefore, I'm suggesting we go to those whose nonpartisan job it is to go after suspected criminals.

Below are five different actions you could take to increase the chances that W. is at least investigated for what I believe are his crimes."

1. Write to the Department of Justice.
2. Report a crime to the Department of Justice: Link <https://www.justice.gov/actioncenter/report-crime>
3. Contact the FBI: Members of the public can report violations of U.S. federal law or suspected terrorism or criminal activity as follows... <https://www.fbi.gov/tips>
4. Contact your local District Attorney about what Bush did.
5. Contact your Representatives.

Mr. Markoff suggests that in writing, simply ask something like: "How can your office not recommend going after George W. Bush, an admitted torturer and a man who lied to our country to start an unnecessary war that caused the death of over 500,000, many of them women and children?"
